Killer Burgers

EXTREME BURGER EXPERIENCE JOINS EUGENE'S
DOWNTOWN DINING SCENE By William Kennedy

These days it seems the coolest place for Portland eateries to expand to is downtown Eugene. Joining Voodoo Doughnut, Townshend's Tea and Sizzle Pie is Portland's Killer Burger — the kind of joint that puts bacon on everything. And that tells you what kind of place you're dealing with: This is food-challenge territory; not for the faint of heart, the timid eater, or Morrissey fans; the kind of place that calls its doubles "fatty," small portions "girlie," veggie options "metro" and their happy hour "crazy hour." This is hang-over food for a growing boy or anyone who's hungry (and carnivorous enough) to eat like one.

Killer Burger's signature is arguably the Peanut-Butter-Pickle-Bacon Burger (sweet and savory bacon, smoky house sauce, mayo, grilled onion and pickle). The peanut butter is house made. Also on the menu are exotic flavors like the Black Molly (smoky house sauce, grilled onion, Philly steak, provolone, brined green chilies, mayo and bacon). All burgers are served with fries.

But Ryan Reyna, manager of Killer Burger's Eugene location, says what truly sets Killer Burger apart is the focus on employees. "If you're happy eating a burger it's going to taste better than when you're sad," Reyna jokes, continuing: "Our whole philosophy is if the employees are happy then the customers are happy. If you come in on any given day and look back into the kitchen — we're going to be laughing."

This ethos spills over into Killer Burger's fun, rock 'n' roll interior — an appropriate neighbor to Sizzle Pie's gritty and urban aesthetic. To go along with your burgers, you can get soft drinks, local beers — including the delicious, Killer Burger-brewed Bloodshed Red — and mixed drinks. There's even a Kid's Killer Basket for the little ones in your life.

So how're the burgers? I admit I was skeptical about the Peanut-Butter-Pickle-Bacon Burger. I love all those things alone, but together — on a burger — it just doesn't seem right. But when in Rome, order what the locals are eating, and soon, placed before me was a compact burger on a soft bun that dissolved into a delicious mix of grease, creamy peanut butter and bacon.

While I don't think anyone lacking the metabolism of a hummingbird should eat that burger very often (without consulting a medical professional), I'm a convert. The juicy beef and interplay of creamy, salty peanut butter and crunchy bacon and pickle alongside grilled onion was like an erotic hot-tub mouth party — but less creepy.

In the little over two months since opening, Reyna says Killer Burger's business has been brisk in Eugene's revitalized downtown, especially for the weekend after-hours crowd spilling from nearby bars and clubs. ■

Killer Burger is located at 50 W. Broadway and its hours are Monday through Thursday 11 am to 10 pm and Friday and Saturday 11 am to 2 am. Killer Burger is closed on Sundays for us all to recover. For more info and to check out the full menu, go to killerburger.biz.

GOLDEN DRAGON ROLL

New Sushi Fusion

MAKOTO COMBINES KOREAN AND JAPANESE FOOD WITH BEAUTIFUL STYLE By Vanessa Salvia

A new restaurant has opened in downtown Eugene, nestled near the domineering Capstone buildings — Makoto, Japanese for "truth" or "honesty," isn't located far from a handful of other sushi and Japanese restaurants in the area. But Makoto plans to do things differently.

Watching Chef Yun Song at work behind the sushi bar at Makoto is like watching a master painter's brushstrokes. In making a golden dragon roll, his hands work quickly but carefully, slicing avocado thin enough to gild the dragon's "head." He places spoonfuls of smelt roe just so on top, illuminating the dragon's scales. He thinly slices a carrot, paints the plate with unagi sauce, then pulls the thin tip of the carrot through it to feather the sauce.

When he serves the roll, his head is down and his hands have moved on to the next task, but you can see his eyes just barely looking up at you as you take a bite, a smile playing imperceptibly across his face as you nod your head in approval.

Chef Song was previously sushi chef at Sushi Station, and it's no surprise that Makoto's owner, a Korean man named BH Jang, sat in front of Chef Song, also Korean, on his regular visits there. Makoto's head server, Marla Rogers, also worked with Song at Sushi Station for five years. "BH was a longtime customer of ours," says Rogers. "He would always come in and sit at the bar in front of Yun. They became good friends."

Jang worked at Hynix in Eugene before starting his own semiconductor company called Semiconductor Technology America. "He was looking to dive into a new business, and he has the love for sushi and the aesthetic eye," she says. "Because they're both Korean, we have a lot of traditionally Korean dishes. We wanted to make the menu as big as possible and offer things that no other restaurants were offering."

The menu is large and varied, offering plenty of sushi, sashimi, nigiri and gunkan (ingredients wrapped in seaweed in a boat shape). Most of the Korean dishes are based around Korean barbecue, like bibimbap, a bowl of rice topped with a salty, spicy mix of grilled meat and vegetables. Orders can be as affordable as a salmon or yellowtail hand roll for $2.95, or as rich as the seafood kabocha for $21 — a kabocha squash filled with vegetables and seafood.

The 120-seat Makoto first applied for building permits in August and enjoyed its private, soft opening on Jan. 9. The tables and bar are fashioned from salvaged fallen redwood sourced over a five-month period by general contractor Tony Kim, who also made the highly polished black walnut platters upon which rest Makoto's sashimi platters. A huge chunk of salvaged maple holds wine bottles.

Yun has been a sushi chef for 15 years. He's originally from a South Korean town called Muju and has lived in Eugene for eight years. Kim, who enjoys Yun's food, says he has "very nice skills, very good decorative skills, and they get the best ingredients they can get."

Rogers says all Northwest restaurants use the same seafood suppliers, but what makes the difference is "how you store it, how often you order and how you cut it." In other words, the skill of the chef. And Chef Yun has what it takes. ■

Makoto is located at 1167 Willamette St. and is open 11 am to 10 pm Sunday through Thursday and 11 am to 11 pm Friday and Saturday.

TIFFANY NORTON AND MARK KOSMICKI

Party On, Eugene

PARTY DOWNTOWN CHEFS

TIFFANY NORTON AND MARK KOSMICKI
DISH ON LIFE IN EUGENE By Vanessa Salvia

Tiffany Norton, 33, and Mark Kosmicki, 37, the chefs and owners of Party Downtown, have a hard time settling on a favorite dish. "I really like the lamb bacon," Kosmicki says. "But that's fleeting," Norton adds. "We only had four bellies."

"I love this Brussels sprouts dish," Norton says, pointing to a side dish of roasted Brussels sprouts, beer jam and fried garlic.

Kosmicki suggests the meatballs with pumpkin marina and hazelnut parsley sauce before tossing out, "It's hard to have favorites when we're trying to put our heart and our intelligence into everything."

Norton and Kosmicki seem to be the ideal couple to turn their love of food into restaurant ownership. They've been together nine years and gave up bickering long ago. As in the best partnerships, both have developed personally and professionally since making each other's acquaintance.

"I was a super picky eater until the time I was 20," Norton says, "a vegetarian who didn't eat vegetables." She began working in restaurant kitchens, eventually realizing how good food could be. She was traveling through Eugene on her way to culinary school in California when she and Kosmicki, originally from Omaha, Nebraska, met during his second summer here.

Kosmicki worked in restaurants, starting with Hardee's at age 15 and most recently Lucky Noodle for four years. He also toiled at Creative Growers, a farm in Noti that sells only to restaurants. Still, he considered it simply work. "I never took pleasure in cooking, I guess, until I met Tiffany and started paying attention to it more."

Before opening the cart, Norton worked part-time in a catering kitchen and at the Groundwork Organics farmers market booth. She was Belly's pastry chef and worked at several other restaurants, including Jo Fed's and Bel Ami.

Nearly five years ago, teaming up with Red Wagon Creamery, they opened Party Cart. Unlike many cart owners, they did not want a restaurant. "Then we realized it actually could be easier if we had a bigger space and had help," Norton says. "We wanted to keep changing the menu and have interesting food."

That they do. Party Downtown opened nearly two years ago. The pair enjoys a following from the cart days and new customers who discover what Kosmicki calls their "quality, organic, tasty food in a situation where you don't have to spend your whole paycheck."

Growing along with their appreciation of food was awareness of the social and environmental impact of food production. Both befriended farmers and farm workers. They also began to appreciate high-quality produce and how other restaurants were using it.

The pair seriously considered moving to the Bay Area or Portland before opening their cart, but they sensed that Eugene was on the upswing. Norton says they decided to build something here rather than take their skills and leave. "We were like, 'Let's stay in Eugene and let's be part of it.'"

The couple strongly believes in supporting local farms. "We really believe in using local products and supporting the community, not just by having, ideally, a successful business but by having deep roots in the community," she says. "We're friends with every farmer that we buy from. We don't need to and we don't care about getting rich off of this restaurant. We want to survive and thrive but we want everyone involved to thrive also."

Their commitment to local extends to their sustainable, biodynamic beer and wine list that is sourced entirely from Oregon and Washington.

Party Downtown is not an everyday dinner destination for most people, with entrees that range from $12 (for organic beef burger) to $30 (for the multi-course Kitchen's Choice), and Norton says if people have to make economic choices she would rather they go to the farmers market and buy local produce before eating at her restaurant.

"Our goal is to operate in a respectful way for the future of the planet and for our local community," Kosmicki says. "People don't think of their food choices as something that affects everyone, but it really does." ■

PRESSING LOCALLY HARVESTED PLUMS ON A HAND-BUILT PRESS AT WILDCRAFT CIDER WORKS

It's Cider Time

There's no shortage of ciderhouses in Portland, and now the Willamette Valley is jumping on-board the fruit-filled trend. Some hit the market early: 2 Towns Ciderhouse, which opened in Corvallis in 2010, is now expanding its craft cider sales to Alaska, Idaho and Nevada. And some, such as WildCraft Cider Works and Elk Horn Brewery, opened just last year, offering their brand new apple-y goodness to the people of Eugene.

But if you think cider is confined to apples alone, think again. These cider makers are using pears, blackberries, ginger, elderberries, hops and other surprising ingredients to whip up delicious fermented fruit concoctions, bound to tempt even the most loyal of craft beer devotees. Step up to the tap, Eugene, and get your cider on.

WILDCRAFT CIDER WORKS

Cider maker Sean Kelly sees potential in the abandoned orchards and berry patches of Lane County — in fact, he seeks them out. “Open your eyes, and you will see them everywhere,” says Kelly, who opened WildCraft Cider Works near 4th and Lincoln last month.

Kelly started out in the salvaged wood business, reusing unwanted wood to build furniture and spiral staircases. He brewed and fermented on the side, but the idea of salvaging fruit and turning it into dry, hard cider beckoned to him. “I guess the idea of WildCraft is a conglomeration of all the loves in one,” Kelly says.

WildCraft Cider Works aims to promote sustainable agriculture by revitalizing old orchards instead of relying primarily on commercial orchards. Kelly says that WildCraft harvests from orchards planted up to 150 years ago — one key orchard is at Cheviot Hill Sheep Farm near Pleasant Hill, where pioneer Elijah Bristow built his first homestead. It's one of many Lane County orchards planted by pioneers in the 1800s and more or less left to its own devices.

“Really, it's about creating a cleaner product that is more exhibitivite of the natural orchards that we're harvesting,” Kelly says. “Some of these are old colonial varietals that are not grown commercially. In about four months, we've been able to make 10 different ciders, and we have five more in production.”

Gail Gould, who owns Cheviot Hill Sheep Farm, says that while the apple trees have been replanted over the years, some trees in her orchard are around 100 years old, producing apples traditionally used to make cider. “It's really a true farmhouse-style cider,” Gould says, “and it's closer to traditional French cider than English pub cider, which can be overly sweet.”

So what does a wild-crafted cider taste like? That depends entirely on the type of cider you're trying, and there are quite a few.

WildCraft's flagship dry cider is delightful and classic, not overly sweet, with a pleasant finish. Because WildCraft doesn't backsweeten, or add sugar at the end of the fermentation process, “the whole thing comes alive,” Kelly says. “Your palette becomes drawn to these subtleties of taste.”

This goes for all of WildCraft's ciders, from its wild plum small-batch cider, made with freeze-pressed Mirabelle plums, to its tart cherry cider, which uses Willamette Valley cherries fermented alongside apples.

But WildCraft's perries, or pear ciders, are what really shine. Its Pioneer Perry glows with rich, warm and hearty flavors, not as sharp as a traditional apple cider. Kelly says the pears come from a select handful of pioneer orchards.

The elderberry perry, besides being fun to say, holds a unique taste, with the sweet fruitiness of Cottage Grove elderberries balancing the satisfying wholesomeness of the fermented pear.

WildCraft pairs its ciders with a tasteful, albeit higher-priced, menu, and Kelly says most of the menu items incorporate cider into the recipe. The cheese plate is exquisite: three wedges of cheese accompanied by local honey, fruit, walnuts and membrillo — a sweet, thick jelly.

Other offerings from Chef Ryk Francisco include savory truffle mac and cheese, housemade crepes with veggie, cheese or meat fillings and brochettes served with chewy flatbread.

Kelly says since opening the cider house in late November of last year, he's seen clientele of every age and background enter the historic brick building on Lincoln Street near the Whiteaker neighborhood. With handcrafted, salvaged redwood tables and an old-time ambiance that's hard to fake, WildCraft is well on its way to becoming a community staple.

And for the future? Kelly is dreaming big — rooftop dining with a spiral staircase. “On summer nights, it would be so awesome,” he says, smiling. “We're working on it.”

ELK HORN BREWERY

Stephen and Colleen Sheehan want you to know that Elk Horn Brewery is up and running, they now have a suite of housemade ciders and beers on tap and, no, they are definitely not a corporation.

"I feel like sometimes people look at us like we're some kind of corporate infrastructure that came to Eugene when actually, no, we were a food cart," explains Colleen Sheehan, co-owner of Elk Horn. "We scrapped and hustled and made this with our bare hands."

"We're the little guy for sure," Stephen Sheehan adds.

Veterans of Eugene cuisine with their food cart Delacata, the wife-and-husband team opened Elk Horn Brewery in August, serving other local brews because they didn't yet have official approval to make beer and cider.

Elk Horn held its grand opening on Jan. 20, and the Sheehans say they're excited to show Eugene what their restaurant and brewery is all about.

With its neon-green logo and visible location on Broadway and Hilyard near the UO campus, the restaurant occupies an old Carl's Jr. building, although you'd never know it after the remodel. The inside, with a roomy, split-level design, is an explosion of taxidermy: Mounted elk heads, antler light fixtures and posed bobcats fit the bill for Elk Horn's theme of "Wild Oregon."

And so does the menu. The food still reflects Delacata's "Southern meets Northwest fusion" motto — savory hushpuppies, the most amazing chicken and waffles you've ever had, tasty desserts — but the expanded resources of a restaurant and brewery have allowed the Sheehans to broaden their scope, tapping into everything Oregon has to offer. And when it comes to cider, the Sheehans are full of ideas.

The 11 percent ABV dry cider is heady and sharp, pairing deliciously with crawfish pasta, and the blackberry cider brings gusts of summer-tinged flavors with each sip. Elk Horn's organic cider apples come from Hood River in northern Oregon.

The Sheehans say that they're the only ones in town who have a Randall system, a filter that infuses a base cider or beer with a flavor of the brewer's choosing. For example, Stephen Sheehan says, "We could stuff that filter with cranberries and cinnamon, and then run the cider through it to create a cranberry cider."

Colleen Sheehan says they plan to launch a botanical cider series in the spring. "We really want to incorporate everything you can find or forage in Oregon, from yarrow to nasturtium to honeysuckle," she says.

Stephen Sheehan adds that he'd like to experiment with wild yeast ciders, drawing from the yeast that grows naturally on the skin of the apple.

The Sheehans and their brewmaster, Sam Scoggin, are headed to the Kona Brewers Festival in Hawaii this March, and later this year, they're planning on adding wildflower honey mead to their list of fermented delights.

You can't get Elk Horn's brews in bottles yet, but that's because they're flying out of the taps in the restaurant. "We'll distribute, but right now we can't keep up with the volume we're selling in-house," Stephen Sheehan says. "We have at least two or three businesses a week calling to get our cider on tap. But we've got to be able to sell it here first!"

2 TOWNS CIDERHOUSE

It only makes sense that a ciderhouse employing a high percentage of redheads would produce a hard cider called Ginga Ninja. "We decided we really needed to come up with a cider that was representative of the gingers at 2 Towns, and that's kind of what got the idea started," explains 2 Towns CEO Lee Larsen.

Hard apple cider with fresh-pressed ginger juice is only one of the creative combinations that flows from 2 Towns' tap. Since EW first chatted with 2 Towns in 2013, the ciderhouse has grown, experimenting with alternative flavors while expanding its offerings to other states.

"2014 was a really exciting year for us," Larsen says. The ciderhouse expanded its production facility, added seven new employees and nurtured its estate orchard in Corvallis, getting it ready for its first major harvest this year.

2 Towns released Ginga Ninja as a seasonal cider, but Larsen says the gingery and refreshing drink will soon be available year-round, due to its popularity. Other seasonals include Cherried Away, a crisp, tart beverage, Made Marion, sweet and fruity, and Rhubarbarian, a quirky mix of sharp rhubarb and delicious apple.

And then there are 2 Towns' limited releases, which give the cider makers a chance to explore their creativity.

"One of the really cool things about living here in Oregon and the Pacific Northwest in general is the insane diversity of super high-quality produce," Larsen says, and that diversity inspires the cider makers to try new things. "In our pursuit to push the bounds of cider, every single person here is always coming up with ideas."

Larsen says 2 Towns keeps a bulletin board where anyone on staff can pin their ideas for new cider combinations and flavors. Such openness spawned limited releases of Cot in the Act, an apricot cider with tasty citrus, and Cidre Muscato, yummy, sweet and wine-like with the addition of muscat grapes.

"We created the limited-release line so that we could experiment," Larsen says. "The craft beer mentality that exists in Oregon is so strong, and people always want to try new things, so limited releases allow us to do that but at the same time rotate different flavors through."

Up next in the limited-release lineup is Bourbon Honey Special Sauce, a hard cider made with Oregon honey and aged in bourbon barrels — look for it sometime this March.

Larsen says that the 2 Towns Ciderhouse Tap Room, located just outside of Corvallis off OR-34, recently underwent an expansion, with 14 house ciders on tap, foosball tables and live music on the weekends. The tap room isn't big on food but offers cheese plates, meat plates, bread and hummus.

For a few years, 2 Towns has considered adding a taphouse in Eugene, since the name "2 Towns" refers to Corvallis and Eugene. "It's been a high priority for a while, and we're still looking for possibilities down there," Larsen says. "We haven't found that right spot yet, but it's still something we're thinking about."

And just because 2 Towns is expanding, Larsen says, doesn't mean the ciderhouse is headed for mass produced commercialism. "Our intention is to continue to advance the craft and, a lot of times, having more people, ideas and equipment can really help that evolution rather than hinder." ■

WildCraft Cider Works is located at 390 Lincoln St. and is open 4 pm to 11 pm Tuesday through Thursday and 3 pm to midnight Friday through Saturday. Elk Horn Brewery is located at 686 E. Broadway Street and is open 11 am to 10 pm Tuesday through Thursday, 11 am to 11 pm Friday and Saturday and 9 am to 9 pm Sunday.

A Taste of Mexico City

XOCO FOOD CART
BRINGS SWEET HORCHATA
AND SPICY PAMBAZOS
TO EUGENE By Daemion Lee

Ever since Xoco Mexican Street Food set up shop on 13th Avenue last October, the food cart has focused on introducing Eugene to its unique Mexican cuisine.

"You can taste it; it's from Mexico City," Gregorio Gonzalez, cook and co-owner of Xoco, says with a smile. Inside the small, brightly colored cart, Gonzalez cuts open a bolillo roll and begins making a torta, Mexico City's take on a sandwich, consisting of a roll filled with meat, cheese and veggies.

He says he grew up in Mexico's capital and learned to cook because his family used to run a restaurant and food cart. "I was the one after school going to work," he says. "My way to cook is basically my mom and grandmother and grandfather's way of cooking."

Within minutes, the torta is ready to go and Gonzalez hands it out through the window, wrapped in a white paper bag. The torta is a hearty meal in itself, spicy and savory, perfect to grab on the run in the afternoon or evening.

Besides tortas, Xoco also specializes in pambazos, which are similar to tortas but soaked in a spicy red sauce, and homemade drinks such as horchata, a sweet rice milk. Xoco's tostadas are particularly tasty, a potent combination of chicken, bacon and chipotle. They also make their own salsa and, this winter, champurrado (Mexican hot chocolate) is on the menu.

It's a family-run food cart, so relatives are usually nearby. Gonzalez's brother helps with the cooking and Rachel Poplack, the other co-owner of Xoco and Gonzalez's partner, is never too far away, though she is often busy taking care of their two children. "We'd been talking about a food cart for a couple of years," Poplack says. Late last year, their idea finally became a reality: a bright orange, yellow and green food cart with a hand-lettered sign that says "Xoco Mexican Street Food."

The name Xoco, Gonzalez says, is pronounced "Sho-koh" and comes from the ancient Aztec word for the prickly pear cactus fruit. "It grows two fruits, one is sweet, one is not sweet," Gonzalez says about the prickly pear. The latter fruit is the one they call "xoco" and is often used in traditional Mexican cooking.

In Mexico City, food carts selling food like tortas and pambazos are everywhere. "You find five or six, sometimes 10 food carts together," Gonzalez says. "Each one has its own flavor."

For now, though, there is only one food cart in Eugene selling Mexican-style street food. Gonzalez admits it's not exactly like the food in Mexico City. "But this is the closest," he says. ■

Xoco is located on East 13th Avenue near the Bijou, open Monday through Friday 11 am to 5 pm and Saturday 11 am to 8 pm. Check out Xoco's Facebook page for updates and special offers.

Barbecue Sauce for the Bacon Cheeseburger on Crack

FROM CHOW

"It takes a lot of time to make everything that goes into our food," says Chow owner Mitchel Hescheles, "and people can taste it."

Hescheles attended culinary school out of high school and had a coffee house in Springfield years ago, before the renewal programs encouraged the growth that the city now enjoys. He admits that was a tough time to run a restaurant in Springfield, but even after that closed, his goal was to try again some day. Hescheles then joined the Army and was stationed at various spots around the states and in Korea for three years.

His family was here, so after the Army he returned and opened Chow two years ago. He also owns Moe's Tavern, located right next door. Chow offers burgers, sandwiches and salads, but with a twist, such as zucchini fries, ham cooked in Coca-Cola or candied nuts on a salad. Patrons can also enjoy portabella carbonara, ratatouille or garlic-seared salmon. Meats are sourced from Bright Oak Meats, located just blocks away.

Lots of restaurants offer a burger, but Hescheles' approach is a far cry from a piece of meat and a bun. While in culinary school, he was taught to combine flavors in unexpected ways, which he does, to great effect. For instance, his burger special, The Merry Prankster, boasts blueberry mayonnaise, a Cajun-seared patty, Swiss cheese, hot sauce, blue-cheese pesto, arugula and potato chips. "It's a lot of flavors," he says, "but nothing overwhelms anything else."

Hescheles has become known for his brown-sugar crusted bacon, which graces this Bacon Cheeseburger on Crack along with potato chips (on the burger), housemade pimiento cheese, cheddar and pepper jack cheese. "Our job is to create food memories," he says. "I hope that people will be tasting lots of different things, and things they've never had before, and then say, 'Oh God, that was good!'" — Vanessa Salvia

Makes about 6 cups of sauce

- 2 jalapeño peppers
- 1 poblano pepper
- 2 apples, peeled and chopped
- 2 teaspoons cumin
- 2 teaspoons each ground white, red and black pepper
- 1 tablespoon paprika
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup garlic
- 1 cup orange juice
- 1 cup hard apple cider (Hescheles likes 2 Towns, made in Corvallis)
- 1 cup brown sugar
- 1/2 cup molasses
- 1/2 cup balsamic vinegar
- 1/2 cup apple cider vinegar
- 1/2 cup Worcestershire sauce
- 1/8 cup Frank's hot sauce
- 1 cup toasted, chopped pecans, optional (Hescheles omits the nuts from the sauce at the restaurant because of allergy concerns, but when he makes it at home, he includes them.)

Roast the jalapeño and poblano peppers. Place the peppers, apples and seasonings through garlic in a food processor and process until finely ground. It may be useful or necessary to add the orange juice to the food processor and process with the liquid until no chunks remain.

Place the seasoning paste and all other ingredients in a pot. Simmer on low heat until thickened. The sauce may look a little thin, but it will thicken upon standing.

To prepare the burger, spread the bottom of a ciabatta roll with pimiento cheese. Sear the burger patty in some of the sauce. Top the patty with cheddar and pepper jack cheeses, bacon slices, more sauce and crushed potato chips.

Kafta on Skewers

FROM WILLIE'S LEBANESE AND NORTHWEST CUISINE

Lebanese food is a fresh, simple and flavorful cuisine using generous amounts of olive oil, garlic, lemon and herbs. Lamb is often the meat of choice, as in these skewers, that come served with a delicious char from the grill along with hummus and pocket bread.

Chef Walid "Willie" Saleeby grew up in Beirut, Lebanon, and has operated fine dining restaurants in Eugene for 31 years, first at Willie's on 7th Street, later at Waterfront Bar and Grill. Willie's Lebanese and Northwest Cuisine opened on International Way in Springfield in May 2013. Willie's on 7th Street was known for its classic fine dining menu, and Saleeby always wanted to be able to share more of his Lebanese delicacies, but when he operated more than one restaurant, he didn't have the time. Now that he is focused on only one restaurant, he has combined the best of both.

Willie's Lebanese and Northwest Cuisine takes the classics from Willie's on 7th such as steak Diane, pepper steak, rack of lamb, scampi and quail preparations, and combines it with Lebanese flavors. Appetizer plates, salads and about half of the entrée menu are Lebanese dishes, such as Moroccan prawns, falafel balls with tahini sauce or fattooosh salad, a flavorful and fragrant mixture of tomatoes, onions, mint, lots of lemon, garlic, parsley and toasted pita bread. Diners can choose from kibbeh balls made with pine nuts, beef, lamb and bulgur served in a rich yogurt sauce. Shish Tawook is marinated and skewered chicken breast served over saffron rice along with hummus and a salad.

No matter the dish, diners will taste the flavors that Saleeby grew up with in his Lebanese home. Saleeby says this kafta is a simple-to-make dish that brings the fresh flavors of his homeland to your table. In choosing the lamb, Saleeby stresses using local lamb, because the physiology of local lamb results in a much milder and sweeter tasting meat than the strong-tasting New Zealand lamb. — Vanessa Salvia

2 pounds ground lamb
1 cup finely chopped parsley
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1/4 teaspoon ground clove
3 teaspoons salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper

Mix all ingredients in a bowl and combine well. Form into balls the size of a large egg. (When Saleeby demonstrates, his hand looks like it's holding a large lemon.) Put your skewer through the meat and form the meat to the shape of the skewer. Use ice water on your hands to keep the meat from sticking to your fingers.

Grill on all sides until done, keeping the meat slightly pink inside. The cooking time will vary with the size of your skewers. Serve as Saleeby does, with hummus drizzled with some good quality olive oil and pita bread.

Pork Chop Sandwich

FROM THE BLIND PIG

According to Blind Pig owner Rick George, the pork chop sandwich is to his hometown of Butte, Montana, as the cheesesteak is to Philly. George moved to Eugene in 1982 and worked for years as a stagehand at the Hult Center. He missed his pork chop sandwiches from Butte, so he started making his own.

"I've had friends from Montana say that mine are 100 times better than the sandwiches they got in Butte," George says. "I even had a lady come here to try my sandwiches who used to work at the top pork chop sandwich place in Butte for 30 years, and she said mine are better." Though the sandwich is called a "chop sandwich," it's actually made with a tenderloin. George also makes delicious smoked salmon chowder, made with salmon smoked in-house.

George says he always wanted to have his own bar, and after getting out of the stagehand business he ran his own place before purchasing the Blind Pig six years ago. In a nod to the Prohibition era, the name refers to the practice of getting patrons into the drinking establishment through some sort of attraction. "They'd have a spotted chicken or a two-headed goat or a blind pig that people would want to see," George explains. "So after people paid their admission to see the spectacle, they would get their complimentary beverage."

George says in Prohibition-era parlance, a speakeasy was considered more of a nightclub while a "blind pig" was more of a casual neighborhood bar, which is the feel he was going for. His ongoing remodeling is an attempt to bring back some of that early ambience, including stained glass above the bar. When the power went out last year, George set up candles and played old shellac records on a gramophone. The Blind Pig opens at 6:30 am seven days a week for breakfast service, and doesn't close until 2:30 am. — Vanessa Salvia

1 pork tenderloin, sliced 1/2-inch thick
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons salt
2 eggs, beaten
1 1/2 cups beer
oil for frying

Pound pork to tenderize and to make the slice a uniform thickness.

Combine batter ingredients and stir until well-blended. Coat pork thoroughly with batter. Deep fry at 350 degrees until golden brown. Drain on paper towel while assembling bun. Serve on a hamburger roll with onion, pickle, mustard and lettuce. George serves these sandwiches with yellow mustard, but offers hot Chinese mustard for those wanting a little more kick.
